“XXI Century Leadership: how to define and achieve common goals today”

Juan Rivera

*Ass. Prof. International Management, Loyola University, Maryland
Director, American Leadership Strategies LLC. ALS Washington DC*

Leadership has evolved from “very influential people and behaviors” to a more collective and emergent form of influence. This workshop will showcase how both forms co-exist presently at the individual, group and social levels and the impact that leadership has in our personal and professional lives. Recommendations for being more effective in both modern and traditional forms of leadership will be made.

Juan Rivera has a Law and Management Degree, an International MBA and a PhD in Management. He has designed, implemented and taught multiple leadership development programs in Europe, Russia, US and Latin America.

Please, RSVP here (free): <http://ecusabostonjune2016.eventbrite.com>

Followed by a Networking Reception
